CONGRESS AGENDA

NCCN 4th Annual Congress: Hematologic Malignancies[™]

Program Overview

The treatment of hematologic malignancies is increasingly complex. Issues relating to pathology, transplantation, and various new therapies require oncologists and hematologists to stay abreast of new advances. In addition, targeted therapies and oral treatments bring new benefits to patients. This Congress will focus on the new approaches that have been incorporated into patient management, including the use of drugs, biologics, and diagnostics. The agenda will address acute myeloid leukemia, chronic myeloid leukemia, chronic lymphocytic leukemia, multiple myeloma, non-Hodgkin's lymphomas, and supportive care issues in hematologic malignancies.

Educational Objectives

Following this Congress, participants should be able to:

- Outline the existing and emerging induction therapies for elderly patients with AML
- Formulate an appropriate treatment plan for patients with APL, from induction through maintenance, based on the available evidence
- Describe the clinical features of cancer stem cells and the implications of newly identified stem cell markers on the success of therapy for patients with CML
- State the various treatment options available for the management of patients with untreated and relapsed or refractory CLL
- Review the clinical results of investigational agents for the treatment of multiple myeloma
- Identify optimal induction therapies for patients with newly diagnosed multiple myeloma
- List clinical studies relating to the treatment of relapsed multiple myeloma in elderly patients
- Summarize some of the significant changes incorporated in the recently updated 2008 WHO classification of lymphomas
- Identify the prognostic significance of biomarkers and the role of gene expression profiling in DLBCL
- Describe the characteristics and management strategies of tumor lysis syndrome, a potentially fatal complication in hematological malignancies
- Summarize the role of platelet growth-promoting agents in the management of thrombocytopenia
- Outline the risks and benefits of ESAs and blood transfusions in the management of anemia in cancer patients
- Outline the clinical evidence demonstrating the value of intravenous iron supplementation in ESA therapy for patients with chemotherapy-induced anemia
- Describe the role of stem cell transplantation in the clinical management of patients with CML, lymphoma, or multiple myeloma including, where applicable, the use of nonmyeloablative strategies
- Review new data regarding the use of stem cell transplantation in patients with CML, lymphoma, or multiple myeloma
